Each key ring is secured to the cabinet's key block, and is released only when the employee's assigned key tab is inserted.

The Employee's key tab is retained, leaving a record of who has removed a particular key ring. Once the key ring is returned, the key tab is released, and the employee is free to choose another ring.

In the illustration, the employee with the #12 tab has taken a ring. The tab will be released when the ring is restored to its location.
